

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE Manuscript volume from which this work of the Camden Society is derived has been long known as a record of great value: and has been quoted as such by several of the most inquiring and painstaking of our historical writers. Having come into the collection of the founder of the Harleian Library, so highly was its importance estimated by Humphrey Wanley, his librarian, that he described it at greater length than any other to which he ever devoted his attention. His account of its contents occupies no fewer than sixty-five pages of the folio Catalogue of the Harleian Manuscripts (vol. i. pp. 256–311). It was found, however, some years ago, on comparison of this calendar with the book itself, that it was far from presenting a complete view of the whole contents of the Manuscript, many entries being arbitrarily passed over, in the proportion of nearly two-fifths. In consequence it was thought desirable, with a view to an improved Catalogue of the Harleian Collection, which was then in contemplation, to make a fresh abstract of the volume. This was executed in the Manuscript Department of the British Museum in the year 1835; and, as there was no immediate prospect of its being printed, it was made accessible to the public by being classed as the Additional MS. 11,269. This latter book, however, being a mere abstract, page by page, unprovided with any index, is not at present of the least utility, except perhaps to a reader who might require assistance in his attempts to decypher the original.

The contents are of various character: but it may be generally described as a rough register or draft-book into which public business of all kinds, transacted by the clerks in personal attendance upon King Richard the Third, made their daily entries, commencing at that momentous period when the usurper first seized upon the reins of dominion, together with the person of his nephew Edward the Fifth. Such brief titles, or abstracts, of official documents have usually passed by the name of dockets.

A large portion of the book relates to matters which passed the King's Signet,<sup>a</sup> the initiative process towards their being forwarded to the Privy and Great Seals. Some grants, however, are detailed at length, with all the precision and prolixity which characterise Letters Patent; and this is especially the case in the portion now printed, which is limited to the two months of Edward's nominal rule.

King Edward the Fourth died on the 9th of April, 1483; and his son and successor<sup>b</sup> remained under the protection and conduct of his maternal uncle and former governor,<sup>c</sup> Anthony earl Ryvers, until

<sup>b</sup> Edward the Fifth was born on the feast of All Souls the 2d Nov. 1470, in the sanctuary at Westminster, the king his father being then in Flanders. (See communications from Sir Frederic Madden and Mr. W. H. Black in the Gentleman's Magazine for June and Sept. 1832, in correction of various misstatements on this point.) He was consequently in his 13th year at the period of his father's death. He was created Prince of Wales upon the 26th July, 1471, and the ceremony of his investiture is in the MS. Cotton. Vespasian, C. x. f. 217. In the same month an oath was taken by his uncle the duke of Gloucester and other lords assembled in parliament to accept him, if he survived his father, "as true, veray, and righteous king of England."

<sup>c</sup> Ryvers had filled this office from the prince's childhood, having received the appointment when the prince's household was first set up, on the 27th Sept. 1473. The king's directions for the prince's education, addressed on that oc-

the last day of the same month; when, being overtaken on his route to London from Ludlow, where he had been resident as Prince of Wales, his person was seized by the duke of Gloucester, and earl casion to earl Ryvers and the bishop of Rochester, are printed in the Collection of Household Ordinances, published by the Society of Antiquaries 1790, 4to. p. 27*, and again more fully in Halliwell's Letters of the Kings of England, vol. i. p. 136. (Mr. Halliwell there gives the name of Russell to the bishop, but the prince's preceptor was Russell's predecessor in the see of Rochester—Alcock, afterwards bishop of Worcester, and president of the prince's council.) So far as the accomplishments of learning went, the prince is supposed to have done credit to his instructors. Rous describes him as of "mirabilis ingenii, et in literatura pro tempore suo optimè expeditus." Sir Thomas More says of both the brothers, that they "had as many gifts of nature, as many princely virtues, and as much goodly towardness, as their age could receive."

The following particulars of the constitution of the prince of Wales's officers are not generally known, and will be found corrective of much confusion which has arisen on the subject. They are derived from the MS. Sloane 3479, which is an enlarged copy of Sir John Doddridge's History of the Principality of Wales. On the 26th June, 1471, when the prince was nine months old, he was by charter created Prince of Wales; and the king, by letters patent, dated on the 8th July following, ordained the queen, the archbishop of Canterbury, George duke of Clarence, Richard duke of Gloucester, Robert Stillington the bishop of Bath and Wells (and chancellor), Lawrence Booth bishop of Durham, Anthony earl Ryvers, the abbat of Westminster (Thomas Millyng) chancellor to the prince, William Hastings knight lord chamberlain to the king, Richard Fynes lord Dacres steward to the said prince, John Fogge, John Scotte, knights, Thomas Vaughan chamberlain to the prince, John Alcock and Richard Forster to be of council unto the said prince, giving unto them, and every four of them, with the advice and express consent of the queen, large power to advise and counsel the said prince, and the nomination of his officers when they should happen to become void or that the parties were insufficient, the said authority to continue until the prince should accomplish his age of 14 years.

By another charter in English bearing date 10 Nov. anno regni sui 13, (1473) earl Ryvers was appointed governor of the person of the prince, and to have the education and the instruction of him, in all virtues worthy his birth, and to have the government and direction of his servants.

On the 25th Feb. 1482-3, the king addressed to the council of the prince of Wales a code of "ordynances concerning our said sonnes person," and in the Ryvers was sent a prisoner to the North. On the 4th of May the young King was brought to London, and lodged in the Bishop's palace near St. Paul's. The same day, being the first Sunday in May, and the anniversary of that Palm-sunday which had established his father on the throne, had been originally fixed by the Council in London for his coronation;<sup>a</sup> but now that solemnity was deferred to some future day.

To the period of the King's residence in the Bishop of London's palace, which lasted until about the 19th of May, belong some of the earliest entries in this volume,<sup>b</sup> which are apparently minutes of documents ordered to be issued by the Council, and their value is increased from the circumstance that no Register of the Privy Council at this period has been preserved.

Among the matters noticed in these memoranda the most remarkable are some which relate to naval affairs. The principal measures which the leaders of the Queen's party had taken in order to acquire a preponderating influence in the administration, had been two: her eldest son, the marquess of Dorset, being constable of the Tower of prefatory letter thereto those persons are thus enumerated: "Edward by the grace of God king of England and Fraunce, and lord of Irelande, To the right reverend ffaders in God the bisshop of Worcestre [John Alcock] president of the conseil of our dearest first-begottyn sonne Edward prince of Wales, duc of Cornewail, erle of Chester, Marche, and Pembroke; the bisshop of Saint Davies [Richard Martin] his chauncellor; our right entierlie beloved Richard Greye knight his counseillour, sonne to our derrest wief the Quene; Antonye erle Revieres hir brother and Governour to our said sonne; Sir Thomas Vaghan knighte his chamberlayne; sir William Stanley knight, stuard of his houshold; Sir Richard Crofte knight his tresourer; and Richard Hunt (lege Haute) squier countroller of his houshold." MS. Sloane 3479, f. 53 b; where the ordinances follow, being the same as printed by Mr. Halliwell, but with several additional articles. The time of the prince's retirement to bed was altered from 8 o'clock to 9.

London, had taken possession of the late King's treasure lying within that fortress; and her brother sir Edward Wydeville had conducted some of the king's ships to sea in order to command the Channel. On the 10th of May sir Thomas Fulford<sup>a</sup> and Halwell were ordered "to rig them to the sea, in all the haste they could, to go to the Downs among sir Edward and his company,"<sup>b</sup> in order to watch their conduct, and oppose it if necessary; and four days later Edward Brampton, John Wellis, and Thomas Grey were directed to go with other ships to sea to capture sir Edward Wydeville, having further instructions to receive as friends all that came, except the marquess of Dorset, sir Edward Wydeville, and Robert Radclyffe.<sup>c</sup> These last ships, it appears, were to sail from Portsmouth, as William Berkeley, who had been made captain of Carisbrooke,<sup>d</sup> and William Uvedale, who had been appointed lieutenant of Portchester,<sup>e</sup> together with Roger Kelsale, were ordered to victual and set forth the said ships.

<sup>a</sup> Sir Thomas Fulford was son of sir Baldwin, a celebrated Lancastrian captain, beheaded at Bristol in 1461. In 1471, after taking sanctuary at Westminster, he escaped thence, and having been met by a fellowship of three score men, which afterwards increased to one or two hundred, he went down into Devonshire, "and there he hath stricken off sir John Crocker's head, and killed another of the Courtenays, as men say." (Letters of sir John Paston, 15th and 29th Sept. 1471.) He was therefore a man well prepared for any daring enterprise.

<sup>f</sup> "In whiche fore sayd passe tyme the marquys of Dorset, broder unto quene Elizabeth, that before was fled, escapyd many wonderfull daungers, both aboute London, Ely, and other places, whereof to wryte the maner and circumstance wolde aske a longe and great leysour." So writes Fabyan: whether any narrative of the marquess's adventures is preserved I have not discovered. He is said to have taken sanctuary: possibly that was at Ely. At the time of the duke of Buckingham's insurrection Holinshed states that "Thomas marques Dorset came out of sanctuarie, where since the beginning of king Richard's daies he had continued, whose life by the onelie helpe of sir Thomas Lovell was preserved from all danger and perill in the troublous world," and "gathered together a great band of men in Yorkeshire." After that rising he probably fled with the other disaffected nobles to the court of Britany. King Richard offered for his apprehension (among others) 1000 marks in money or 100*l.* land. (Fœdera, xii. 204).

<sup>a</sup> Sir Edward Wydeville had shared in the prosperity of his family. In 1474 he was one of the challengers in the jousts held at the creation of Richard duke of York; and in Feb. 1479 he was proposed as a candidate for the order of the Garter by the duke of Suffolk. In the same year he was made keeper of Portchester castle. In 1480 sir Edward Wydeville and sir James Radcliffe, "knyghtes for the body of oure souverain lorde the kyng," conducted the duchess of Burgundy across the seas when she came to visit her brother (Nicolas, Wardrobe Accounts of Edward IV. p. 165). In 1483 he was with the bishop of Rochester ambassador or commissioner to negotiate a marriage between his brother Anthony earl Ryvers and the princess Margaret of Scotland (Rymer, xii. 171). The earl left him by his will such lands as had belonged to the lady Scales his first wife. In the proclamation issued by king Richard III. shortly before the landing of the earl of Richmond, the name of sir Edward Wodeville accompanies those of Piers bishop of Exeter, Jasper earl of Pembroke, and John earl of Oxford, who had taken themselves to the obeisance of the duke of Britany. On the accession of Henry VII. he was appointed governor of the Isle of Wight, and that office he retained until his death. He was slain at St. Albin in Britany in July 1488, having been in the same year elected a knight of the Garter, but not installed. Hall characterises him as "a valiant captain and a bold champion." (Chronicle, edit. 1809, p. 439.) He died without issue. Dugdale, in his Baronage, vol. ii. p. 231, has attributed part of the history of sir Edward Wydeville to an imaginary uncle of the same name; and he is followed in this division of sir Edward into two persons by Mr. Baker in his pedigree of Wydeville, Hist. of Northamptonshire, ii. 166. That pedigree, it may be remarked, is not only confused in some of its earlier generations (see the Topographer and Genealogist, vol. i. p. 160), but must be further incorrect in making Anthony earl Ryvers leave a widow, afterwards remarried to sir John Neville, a natural son of an earl of Westmerland. The lady in question,—Mary, daughter and heir of sir Henry FitzLewes, is mentioned by Dugdale (Baronage, ii. 233) as a wife of the earl; but very shortly before his death he was contemplating the ambitious alliance with a princess of Scotland which is alluded to in the earlier part of the present note.

The history of the reigns of Edward V. and Richard III. has been written with more than ordinary care and elaboration by Mr. Sharon Turner, in his History of England during the Middle Ages;<sup>a</sup> and his successors can scarcely hope to glean more than a few facts in correction or further elucidation of his researches. The only important accessions of information since obtained were elicited by a more complete examination of the records of the city of York, than was made in the last century by Mr. Drake. This has been accomplished by Robert Davies, esq., F.S.A., late Town Clerk of York, and the result was published in the year 1843.<sup>b</sup>

Mr. Sharon Turner's review of the career of Richard of Gloucester constitutes an historical commentary upon the ancient maxim that

He acquits that prince not merely of the accumulated and exaggerated charges of having murdered Edward prince of Wales, king Henry the Sixth, and his own brother George duke of Clarence: but further of any premeditated design of usurping the crown until that course was forced upon him by circumstances. Such was the sanguinary and merciless spirit of the age, such the hypocrisy, the deceit and violence which entered into all the policy and actions of statesmen, that, in the judgment of this historian, the relatives of the Queen were sure to have prepared the like destruction for their opponents and rivals to which they themselves were sacrificed. It is certainly highly probable that such apprehensions were instilled into the mind of the Duke of Gloucester by his ambitious and worthless cousin Harry duke of Buckingham; and it is evident that bitter feelings of jealousy, almost if not quite amounting to mortal enmity, were entertained towards the Wydevilles and Greys by lord Hastings and others of the old Court party. To the sanguinary policy thus engendered, first Hastings, and afterwards Buckingham, themselves became early and sudden victims,—a retributive fate which in either case<sup>a</sup> appeared peculiarly appropriate to their deserts—

<sup>a</sup> In his poem on the History of Richard the Third, published in 1845, Mr. Turner states that he had then devoted his attention to the history of this period for fifty-three years.

——— nec lex est justior ulla
Necis ut artifices arte perire sua.

The most important particular in which the narrative of Mr. Sharon Turner is open to correction is in respect to the presumed meeting of a parliament in the reign of Edward the Fifth, and the Duke of Gloucester's supposed reception from that body of the dignity and functions of Protector. The historian assumes that a parliament actually met, and that "the parliamentary documents" have been lost.<sup>b</sup> He was led to form this conclusion by two circumstances,—one a statement of the historian of Croyland that a discussion was held "in senatu," which resulted in the removal of the young king to the Tower of London; and the other the existence of "a speech delivered from the throne, to the three estates of the kingdom, as assembled in parliament, in the name of Edward V. and in his presence, as also before the duke of Gloucester."

That no parliament was actually held during this short reign is * This remark is made upon the presumption of the truth of the old charge against Hastings, that he was cognizant of the intended execution of Ryvers and Grey: but perhaps it may be said that no proof of the lord chamberlain's guilt in that respect has been ascertained, and that the length of time which Ryvers is now known to have survived Hastings (as noticed in p. xv.) tends to exculpate the latter.

expressly declared in the act of settlement passed immediately after the meeting of the first parliament of Richard III.<sup>a</sup> But we know from two authorities<sup>b</sup> the day for which a parliament was summoned, namely the 25th of June. A writ of summons addressed to the archbishop of Canterbury for that day is dated on the 13th of May; and, as it contains no allusion to the protectorate, Mr. Sharon Turner inferred from that circumstance that the protectorate did not then exist. This strengthened his supposition (which will be presently noticed) that it was called into existence on the 19th of that month.

It is strange that Mr. Sharon Turner did not draw another more obvious conclusion from this evidence, viz. that, if a writ was issued on the 13th of May for a parliament to be holden on that day six weeks, most certainly no other meeting of parliament would intervene, and especially at so early a date as the 19th of May.

It follows, therefore, that the phrase in senatu used by the Croyland historian must be understood to imply only a council, and not a parliament.

I have now ascertained, from the patent roll of Edward V., that the office of Protector was assumed by the Duke of Gloucester at least so early as the 14th of May: for it was on that day that new commissions of the peace were directed into several counties, and in those commissions his name was inserted as "carissimo avunculo nostri Ricardo duci Gloucestræ protectori Angliæ."<sup>c</sup>

<sup>b</sup> The writ addressed to the archbishop of Canterbury is preserved in his register at Lambeth, and is printed in Nichols's Royal and Noble Wills, 4to. 1780, p. 347. The city of York received a writ for the same day, and, contrary to all former precedent, it was required to send four citizens instead of two: Davies's York Records, p. 146.

It is further worthy of remark, as illustrative of the state of parties, and as justifying in some degree the first measures taken by Richard, that in commissions for taxes,<sup>a</sup> issued a fortnight before, the names of the dukes of Gloucester and Buckingham were not inserted, but the leading personages are the marquess of Dorset "frater regis uterinus," the earl Ryvers "avunculus regis uterinus," the Lord Hastings, &c.

Additional evidence is thus supplied that either party was ready to circumvent and supplant the other:<sup>b</sup> and consequently it is not surprising that their first collision should have led to a more bitter struggle.

The real truth of the case, as Mr. Sharon Turner suggests, was that "both parties were playing the same game of unprincipled violence, and Richard was the most fearless, prompt, determined, and unshrinking." Such he unequivocally showed himself to be in his arrest and execution of the lord chamberlain Hastings; but Mr. Turner was the first to correct a misstatement, which, originating with Sir Thomas More, had pervaded the whole series of our historians,<sup>c</sup> that the execution of Ryvers, Grey, and Vaughan, by the instructions of Gloucester and Hastings, was accomplished at Pontefract castle on the very same day that Hastings was himself hurried to the block upon the green in the Tower of London. Mr. Turner perceived that, whilst Hastings had suffered on the 13th of June, the date of earl Ryvers's will, upon the 23d of that month, at once refuted the idea of those executions having been simultaneous.

<sup>b</sup> Mr. Sharon Turner imagined that the duke of Gloucester deprived lord Hastings of the office of lord chamberlain, and was himself appointed to it: and remarks, "The loss of this dignity may have combined, with Buckingham's superior favour, to incline Hastings to unite himself with the party of the queen." But this is altogether a mistake, and a confusion of two offices. Gloucester was already, and had been for some years, great chamberlain of England: Hastings was chamberlain of the king's household. Had he been required by the new monarch to surrender that office, it would probably have been to make way for sir Thomas Vaughan.

<sup>c</sup> It remains in the Pictorial History of England, published in 1839, vol. ii. p. 121, though corrected by Mr. Sharon Turner in 1823, first edit. iii. 464.

The persons who were sacrificed to party vengeance at Pontefract were the queen's brother Anthony earl Ryvers, once the chivalric lord Scales and the patron of Caxton,<sup>a</sup> the lord Richard Grey one of the queen's sons, sir Thomas Vaughan the chamberlain of the young king,<sup>b</sup>

<sup>b</sup> In the notes to the Poems of Lewis Glyn Cothi, printed for the Cymmrodorion, or Royal Cambrian Institution, in 1837, 8vo. the editor the Rev. John Jones, M.A. of Christchurch, Oxford, (Tegid), at pp. xxviii. 44, and in a pedigree, identifies sir Thomas Vaughan with the son and heir of sir Roger Vaughan of Tretower, co. Brecon, by Cecily, daughter of Thomas ab Phylip Vychan, heiress of Talgarth, in the same county; but Jones, in his History of Brecknockshire, vol. iii. p. 506, and Sir Samuel R. Meyrick, in his notes to Lewis Dwnn's Visitations of Wales, printed for the Welsh MSS. Society, 1846, 4to. vol. i. pp. 42, 106, state the chamberlain of the prince of Wales to have been the youngest illegitimate son of sir Roger Vaughan of Tretower, by an illegitimate daughter of a prior of the monastery of Abergavenny, called Prior coch, or the red-headed; and add that he was the father of Henry Vaughan, whose son Thomas relinquished the name, and, calling himself ap Harry, or Parry, became comptroller of the household to queen Elizabeth, and master of the court of wards and liveries. (See Lodge's Illustrations of British History, i. 302.) This latter account is probably to be preferred; and in that case we may consider the courtier to be the same Thomas Vaughan, an esquire for the king's body, who, having married Alianor, the widow of sir Thomas Browne, under-treasurer of the household to Henry VI. enjoyed in 1464 lands which had belonged to his wife's late husband in the counties of Kent, Surrey, Sussex, and London. (Rot. Parl. v. 534.) This Alianor was the daughter and coheir of sir Thomas Arundel of Bechworth, Surrey, brother to John lord Maltravers, and was, through her eldest son, the progenitrix of the Brownes of Bechworth, baronets, and through her third, sir Anthony, of the viscounts Montagu (see the Topographer and Genealogist, 1853, vol. ii. pp. 318, 335, 337). On the 4th Feb. 1470, Thomas and sir Richard Haute the treasurer of his household, who was also a cousin of the queen.<sup>a</sup> The first three alone are mentioned

Vaughan esquire, treasurer of the king's chamber, was one of the commissioners sent to deliver the garter to Charles duke of Burgundy. (Rymer, xi. 651.) In 1471 he was appointed chamberlain to the prince, and in Sept. 1472, at Windsor, he carried the royal child (being then 22 months old) to welcome Louis de Bruges seigneur de la Gruthuyse. (Archæologia, xxvi. 277.) In 1478 William Herbert second earl of Pembroke appointed him his attorney-general. (Notes to Lewis Glyn Cothi, p. 44.) There is still standing in Westminster abbey, in the chapel of St. Paul, a monument to the memory of sir Thomas Vaughan, consisting of a recessed canopy, and a table-tomb within it, with space at its west end for a chantry priest. The slab was inlaid with brass plates: and the inscription, which is imperfect in Dart and the more recent histories of Westminster abbey, is thus given in Camden's Reges, Reginae, Nobiles, et alij in Ecclesia Collegiata B. Petri Westmonasterii sepulti. 1606. 4to. p. 60:—

Orate pro anima Thomæ Vaughan Militis quondam Camerarii et Thesaurarii Camerae Edwardi Quarti ac Camerarii Principis primogeniti dicti Regis, requiescat in pace. [Amen.]

Aymer & a tander.

The brass effigy remains, excepting the knight's feet: with one of the two shields of arms; this is charged with, Quarterly: 1 and 4, a saltire; 2 and 3, three fleurs-de-lis, over all a bend engrailed. Six scrolls at the sides, which probably contained the motto given by Camden, are all gone. The inscription, which ran round the verge, in its remaining portion has between each word alternately a rose and a sun, but the knight does not wear the livery collar of his royal master. See an engraving in G. P. Harding's Antiquities in Westminster Abbey, 1825, Pl. IX.

<sup>a</sup> The arrest of sir Richard Haute, or "Hawte," is mentioned by Fabyan, and by Speed. He is not named by the Croyland chronicler or by Rous, by Holinshed or Stowe, by Hume or Sharon Turner. Sir T. More converted his name into Hawse, and is followed by Rapin, Henry, Lingard, and the Pictorial History of England. Miss Halsted has changed it both into Hurst and Croft (vol. ii. pp. 54, 55, 73, confusing him with his predecessor in office Sir Richard Croft, mentioned in p. viii. ante). Sir Richard Haute's identity is satisfactorily determined by the Visitation of Kent, where he is distinguished in the family pedigree as "securi percussus castello Pontefracti 1 Edw. 5, jussu regis Richardi 3." He was the son of William Haute of Bishopsbourn or Hautsbourn esquire, by Jane by the majority of historians, and by our great dramatist, who has materially contributed to the notoriety of their untimely fate.<sup>a</sup> Doctor Alcock bishop of Worcester the king's preceptor was among those who were dismissed from his company at Stoney Stratford; but he was perhaps not placed under restraint, for he is known to have been at liberty on the 12th of May, and then present at the sequestration, in London, of the late king's personal property.

The sufferers passed the period of their imprisonment at different places in Yorkshire. Lord Ryvers, who was kept at the castle of

(called in the Visitation Matilda), daughter of Richard Wydeville esquire, soror Richardi comitis de Ripariis, ac amita Elizabethæ reginæ, sponsæ regis Edwardi quarti. (MS. Harl. 1431, fol. 4.) The marriage settlement of his father and mother is preserved among the Harleian charters, and has been published in the Excerpta Historica, 1831, p. 249: and therein his mother's name appears as "Jah'n daughter of Richart Wydeville esquyere of the counte of Kent," and his father as "William Haute esquier of the said counte." It is dated on the 18th July, 7 Hen. VI. 1429, and the marriage was to take place at Calais; where sir Richard Wydeville, the lady's brother, afterwards the first earl Ryvers, was then lieutenant. In 1482 Richard Haute esquire was comptroller of the household of the prince (see before, p. viii.); but before the death of Edward the Fourth he had been knighted, and apparently advanced to the post of treasurer, then vacated by sir Richard Croft, who afterwards had an annuity of 20 marks granted him by Richard III. (MS. Harl. 433, art. 665.) Sir Richard Haute is twice mentioned in the will of his cousin Anthony earl Ryvers, first in reference to some evidences in his possession, and secondly as one of his proposed executors. (Excerpta Hist. pp. 247, 248.) He married the widow of Robert Darcy esquire, by birth a Tyrrell, and had issue. (Visitation.) Richard Haute esquire of Ightham in Kent was attainted 1 Ric. III. and his attainder reversed 1 Hen. VII. (Rot. Parl. vi. 245, 273.)

* In the Mirroure for Magistrates, another name, Clapham, is introduced:—"you must imagine that he (earl Ryvers) was accompanied with the lord Richard Graye, and with Hautt and Clappam, whose infortunes he bewayleth after this manner." Mirroure for Magistrates, 1563, fol. lxxxvii, v. The writer, it will be observed, omits the name of Vaughan, for which "Clappam" may not improbably be a misprint.

Sheriff Hutton, had probably some intimation of his approaching fate on the 23d of June, when he made his will at that place.<sup>a</sup> The lord Richard Grey was detained at the duke of Gloucester's castle of Middleham,—where the duke's son, prince Edward, was also then resident.<sup>b</sup> It is on record that the lord Richard remained there from the 3d of May to the 24th of June. On the latter day he was removed to Pontefract, whither lord Ryvers was also brought from Sheriff Hutton, and the uncle and nephew then found that they had met to die. Upon hearing his fate, the earl, who had previously expressed a wish to be buried in the chapel of our Lady of Pewe at Westminster, for which he had procured some great favours from the papal see, added this affecting postscript to his will: "My will is now to be buried before an image of oure blissid lady Mary, with my lord Richard, in Pomfrete, and Jhesu have mercy of my soule!"

Vaughan and Haute were possibly already prisoners in Pontefract castle. Some brief form of trial was gone through, under the presidency of the earl of Northumberland, then commanding the military force about to be conducted to London for the support of Gloucester; and the execution was superintended by the protector's emissary sir Richard Radclyffe, who is related to have replied with the characteristic brutality of the age, to an indignant appeal which was made by sir Thomas Vaughan against the injustice thus perpetrated. The exact date of this catastrophe has not hitherto appeared in our histories; but the obituary of the collegiate chapel of St. Stephen at Westminster fixes it to the 25th of June.<sup>a</sup>

In the last edition of Dr. Lingard's History (1849) this matter of the executions at Pontefract remains incorrect in many points, though partially altered from its first publication. At vol. iv. p. 227, the narrative still stands as follows (the historian is writing of the 13th of June, and the decapitation of Hastings):—

“ On the same day (and the time should be noticed) Ratcliffe, one of the boldest partisans of the protector, at the head of a numerous body of armed men, entered the castle of Pontefract, and made himself master of<sup>b</sup> the lord Grey, sir Thomas Vaughan, and sir Richard Hawse. To the spectators it was announced that they had been guilty of treason; but no judicial forms were observed; and the heads of the victims were struck off in the presence of the multitude.”

With respect to the Speech addressed to the Parliament which was discovered by Mr. Sharon Turner, it will be found deserving of some further consideration. It was Mr. Turner's view that—

“ This official speech proves that the youthful sovereign was brought by his uncle to meet his parliament in the usual royal manner. The address is made to it, not in the Protector's name, but in the Sovereign's; it was delivered to the Lords and Commons in Edward's presence, whom he styles Kyng Edward the Fifth. The speech was made to both Lords and Commons, as if in full parliament before the throne." <sup>a</sup> Mr. Sharon Turner further suggests a "probability, that the late King's chancellor and ministry, continuing at first in office, summoned the members of the parliament existing at his demise, to meet for present emergencies;" and he appends in his notes the following conclusions,—that the speaker's citing of a "text, such as I found in the divine service of yesterday's feast," implies that the speech was made on a Monday; and that, "as the first act of Richard as Protector is dated the 19th May, and the first grant of Edward from the Tower is on the same day, and as that day in May 1483 was on a Monday, I would infer that this speech was delivered, and the protectorate appointed, on the 19th May. The two acts alluded to are in Harl. MSS. No. 433."

<sup>b</sup> Originally this passage stood with the name of “the earl Rivers” heading the list. (Edit. 1819, iii. 573.) Dr. Lingard altered it only by omitting that name in the text; and in a note modified his statement thus:—“Cont. Croyl. 567. More asserts repeatedly that these murders occurred on the same day as that of lord Hastings. This may be true of the others, but is not correct as to lord Rivers, who was indeed put to death at Pontefract, but a few days later, and by command of the earl of Northumberland. Rouse, 214.” Dr. Lingard then refers to the earl's will.

In these calculations Mr. Sharon Turner appears to have strangely overlooked the fact that there are six chances to one that a feast may occur on another day of the week than Sunday, and indeed he seems to have fancied that by the term "feast" a Sunday was necessarily implied. Dr. Lingard <sup>b</sup> came better prepared to decide upon a question of such a character. He, naturally, was at no loss to ascertain the particular feast to the service of which the text used by the chancellor really belongs: and it proves to be that of the nativity of saint John the Baptist, which is observed upon the 24th of June. It is therefore certain that the speech was not delivered, as Mr. Sharon Turner imagined, upon Monday the 19th of May; but that it was prepared for delivery upon Wednesday the 25th of June, the day for which the opening of parliament had been fixed.<sup>a</sup> It is apparent that the chancellor was not one of the conspirators who were contriving the advance of the Protector to the throne. He proceeded diligently in the elaboration of his speech, and it was fairly transcribed and ready for delivery, when the revolution suddenly burst forth which rendered it a work of supererogation. By the time which had been fixed for the coronation,<sup>b</sup> the duke of Gloucester, with the aid of the duke of Buckingham and his other supporters, had assembled in London a very numerous military force;<sup>c</sup> and then he adopted the very day which was to have witnessed the opening of his nephew's parliament, to declare himself the actual sovereign of the kingdom, and to seat himself on the marble chair in the hall of Westminster.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Proceeding a step further, Miss Halsted has positively stated that the speech was delivered by the new monarch himself. (Life of Richard III. vol. ii. p. 43.)

<sup>a</sup> The Speech itself is so curious, both as a political and a literary monument of the time, that it has been thought desirable to append it to the present Preface, together with that which the same dignitary a few months after addressed to the parliament of Richard III.

<sup>b</sup> The Croyland historian says that the coronation was fixed to take place at the feast of saint John the Baptist: perhaps not meaning precisely the day of the feast. Simon Stallworthe, (a servant of the lord chancellor,) when he wrote on the 9th June the letter printed in the Excerpta Historica, p. 16, expected that it would be solemnised on that day fortnight, that is, the 23d. Those summoned to receive knighthood on the occasion were required to be in attendance on the 18th (see p. xxxii).

<sup>c</sup> "Yt is thought there shalbe xx thousand of my lorde protectour and my lord of Bukyngham men in London this weike, to what intent I knowe not, but to kepe the peas." Letter of Simon Stallworthe, dated the 21st June, printed in Excerpta Historica, 1831, 8vo. p. 17. This Stallworthe was a servant of lord chancellor Russell, and, like his master, was at a loss to tell to what issue the protector's proceedings were tending.

<sup>d</sup> This public demonstration of his assuming the royal dignity is described by the Croyland historian. He was supported on the right hand and the left by the duke of Suffolk and the lord Howard, then or soon after declared duke of Norfolk.

Mr. Davies has disclosed, from the records of the city of York, the important fact that a supersedeas was issued to prevent the assembling of the parliament;<sup>a</sup> and this was probably used as a means to keep away the usurper's un-friends, whilst those who were favourable to him might assemble as before.

It is a point very strongly urged by Mr. Sharon Turner, and by Miss Halsted, in her biography of Richard III., that the protectorate of the duke of Gloucester would have terminated with the coronation of his nephew: because, as Mr. Turner says, "no one of the former minor kings, Henry the Third, Edward the Third, Richard the Second, or Henry the Sixth, had a protector after they were crowned." Consequently, as the historian presumes, the duke of Gloucester dreaded that ceremony, which would have shorn him of his predominant authority: and this is fancied to have been one of the cogent considerations that forced upon him the act of usurpation, as if in self-defence. It appears to me very doubtful that the coronation would have had the consequence imagined by Mr. Sharon Turner: and there is a passage in the lord chancellor's speech which conveys an impression to the contrary. It is to the effect that it was so behovefull that the power and authority of the lord protector should be asserted and established by the authority of the high court of parliament, that that was the greatest and most necessary of all the causes which required its assembling at that time of the year.<sup>b</sup> The chancellor (who certainly had no idea of the duke of Gloucester's intended usurpation) wrote his speech under the impression that the coronation would have already taken place a day or two before the meeting of parliament: and it is therefore plain that he anticipated that the protectorate would be confirmed instead of closed by the approaching solemnities. Even if the title of Protector had been changed for that of Regent, it would not have materially altered the duke of Gloucester's position, nor need he have dreaded such a change if he had been an honest man. But when he had once formed the resolution to seize the crown himself, it was of course a material point that his nephew's inchoant reign should not receive any portion of that solemn ratification which oaths, even in that faithless age, could have conferred.

There is another statement of the earlier writers, and which is retained by our latest historian, Dr. Lingard, that appears to be disproved by the evidence—in this case negative—of the York corporation. It is circumstantially related by Dr. Lingard, on the authority of the continuator of the Croyland chronicle and Sir Thomas More, that the Duke of Gloucester, at the time of his brother's death, was in the marches towards Scotland, and that upon receiving the news he rode southward to York, which city he entered with a retinue of six hundred knights and esquires, all clad, like himself, in deep mourning; that he there celebrated a funeral service for his brother in the minster; and, having collected all the nobles and gentlemen of the neighbourhood, he caused them to swear fealty to his nephew, Edward V., himself setting the example. Upon this statement Mr. Davies* has reasonably argued that if any such proceedings had occurred at York, they would not have passed unnoticed in the records of that city, to which we are indebted for so many facts important to this dark period of our history. In the absence of positive evidence of the place of the duke of Gloucester's abode at the time of king Edward's death, the probability is that he was at his most usual residence, the castle of Middleham in Yorkshire.

* York Records, p. 144. Miss Halsted imagined that she had found evidence of the alleged funereal ceremonies at York: "The interval [since the King's death] had been passed by this prince [Richard] in travelling from the Scottish borders to York, in commanding requiems to be solemnised there and in other large towns (MS. Harl. 433, fol. 176) for the repose of the soul of Edward IV." &c. But the entry of the MS. Harl. 433, to which the lady refers, belongs not to 1483 but to 1484.

In the grants conferred during the Protectorate of the duke of Gloucester, as registered in these pages, the most remarkable are those which were bestowed upon the duke of Buckingham. This nobleman, who in proximity to the throne was next to the reigning house, was powerfully actuated by the unscrupulous ambition which characterised the age. He put himself forward to be the chief abettor of the duke of Gloucester, and aspired to the position which the great earl of Warwick, that setter-up and puller-down of kings, had occupied in the previous reign.<sup>a</sup> By the accession of the prince of Wales to the crown, the government of the principality had become vacant. Had all gone well with the Queen's family, this vice-royalty would doubtless have been given to earl Ryvers, by whom, as the Prince's governor, it had lately been administered. Hence the enmity of Buckingham to Ryvers. He killed, and took possession. The struggle for place and power was then a mortal contest.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>a</sup> John Rous has a passage to this effect: stating that after imprisoning king Edward, Richard bestowed all his property on Henry duke of Buckingham, who then distributing his livery of Stafford knots, boasted that he had as many of them as Richard Neville earl of Warwick once had of Raggid Staves.

<sup>b</sup> In like manner, the successful rivalry of Hastings to Ryvers in respect to the office of lord deputy of Calais—then, on the authority of Commynes, the "best preferment in Christendom," had made them perpetual foes.

Next in power and influence to the duke of Buckingham among the earliest supporters of the duke of Gloucester was Henry Percy, earl of Northumberland. He was retained in the posts of lord warden of the east and middle marches towards Scotland, and of captain of Berwick—the former to be reckoned from the 9th of April preceding, and the latter from the 1st of June.<sup>a</sup> But this was not a new preferment; for the earl was first appointed warden of those marches in the year 1470.

Francis lord Lovell, who became one of the favourite ministers of king Richard, was at a very early period of his patron's supremacy raised to the office of chief butler of England (which had belonged to earl Ryvers), having two days before received a grant of the castle and honour of Wallingford.<sup>b</sup> He had been elevated to the peerage only a few months before the death of Edward IV. and had accompanied the duke of Gloucester in his recent campaign in Scotland. King Richard the Third appointed him chamberlain of his household.

William Catesby, another notorious councillor of the next reign, and who bears the blame in the page of history of having bred much of the mischief which led to the destruction of Hastings, was on the 14th of May made chancellor of the earldom of March;<sup>c</sup> and on the same day John lord Howard<sup>d</sup> was appointed steward of the <sup>a</sup> See pp. 19, 20. Miss Halsted, Life of Richard III. vol. ii. pp. 26, 47, has given to the earl's appointment an undue importance, as having been the immediate price of his adherence to the duke of Gloucester on his accession to power, a point which she was led to urge the more strongly from having mistaken its date as the 1st, instead of the 10th, of May.

<sup>d</sup> Page 4. Mr. Sharon Turner states that lord Howard was also made admiral of England (iii. 402), but such was not the fact. The duke of Glou-

duchy of Lancaster south of Trent.<sup>a</sup> This last was the prelude to much more ample favours; for immediately after the accession of king Richard, lord Howard was placed in possession of the great estates of the duchy of Norfolk, which he claimed by inheritance from the Mowbrays, but which had hitherto been withheld from him, was confirmed Marshal of England, and appointed to exercise the office of Steward of England in all matters pertaining to the Coronation.<sup>b</sup> chester, who had been Lord Admiral for some years, continued so during his nephew's reign; after he became king, he conferred the office upon lord Howard. Mr. Turner mistook the date of his appointment.

<sup>a</sup> The duke of Gloucester himself held the like appointment in the Northern parts, which gave him an official residence at Pontefract castle. (Plumpton Correspondence, p. 26.) There probably was born his natural son John de Pountfreit (also called John of Gloucester), on whom he conferred the great preferment of captain of Calais. (See Rymer's Fœdera, and the MS. Harl. 433.)

<sup>b</sup> Both these patents are printed in Rymer's Fœdera. A long memoir of this first duke of Norfolk of the long line of Howard was written by sir Harris Nicolas for the History of Western Sussex, and printed in that work, Rape of Bramber, pp. 188—194. Where, however, at p. 131, the biographer expresses dissent from Mr. Sharon Turner in regard to the motives which led lord Howard "to abandon the interests of the widow and children of his royal benefactor [Edward IV.], and to identify himself with the ambitious schemes of the Protector,"—considering that the opinion of Mr. Sharon Turner, that Howard's defection may be attributed to resentment at Edward having appointed the marquess of Dorset to supplant him as constable of the Tower, and to his interests clashing with those of the young Duke of York, "is not warranted by facts,"—a little further consideration would probably have led to another conclusion. Anne Mowbray, the daughter and heir of John duke of Norfolk, had been married to the infant duke of York in 1478, and the prince was in consequence created duke of Norfolk, earl Warren, Surrey and Nottingham, earl marshal and marshal of England, and lord of Segrave, Mowbray, and Gower. The heiress died before 1482, when the lords Howard and Berkeley became the coheirs of the Norfolk estates; but there would have been no hope for their rights of inheritance so long as Edward the Fourth and his son the duke

These persons were the most able and active of the partisans of the Protector. Of his other celebrated councillor, Sir Richard Radclyffe,<sup>a</sup> no notice occurs in the documents before us: but another member of that family, Robert Radclyffe,<sup>b</sup> is mentioned as having adhered to the Wydeviles, as being on that account excluded from favour,<sup>c</sup> and subsequently as having been deprived of certain farms which he possessed in the marches of Calais.<sup>d</sup>

The Editor has only a few words to add with respect to the order in which the documents contained in this volume are placed. They are, it will be perceived, taken from various parts of the manuscript volume, in which they were entered at the convenience of the clerks; and, some arrangement being necessary, it appeared desirable that the whole should be brought into one chronological series. This object has in some degree been effected, although it was found to be less practicable than was anticipated, because many of the entries are actually undated, and they are therefore necessarily left to follow, as in the MS., those which have dates. The first document of all, a letter under the King's signet, which is headed "Quinto die Maij," appears to have been prepared at St. Alban's (on the 3rd or 4th), the day of the month being then left blank, and to have been finally issued at London on the 5th, after the King's arrival in London.

of York lived. This circumstance clearly supplies the motive of the lord Howard's adherence to the usurper.

The same uncertainty of dates, as to a few days earlier or later, prevails throughout the whole series of documents. They were evidently entered in the book as the business arose, and some of them did not even pass the signet until several days had elapsed.* The final date of such as had to pass the great seal would of course be some days later.

The Editor has examined the Patent Roll of King Edward the Fifth, which is now the first of the series preserved at the office of the Rolls Chapel. Its entries are not numerous, for it has only forty-nine numbers on the front of the roll, and seven in dorso. The earliest in point of date are the appointments of judges,—the same who had served in the former reign,—on the 21st of April. It is remarkable that nothing else which may have passed the great seal before the establishment of the government of the Protector was placed upon record, except some arrangements with merchants on the indorsement, and the commissions for the collection of taxes. These were dated on the 27th of April. The commissions of the peace issued for the new reign are dated on the 14th of May, and in these we find the first recognition of the authority of the Protector, (as already noticed in p. xii.) he being named as a justice of the peace in every county. The ordinary grants are all recorded as issuing on the sole authority of the King, and the Protector is not named in them. His name occurs only in the patent granted to the duke of Buckingham, in the terms which will be found at p. 10 of the present volume. Every grant on the Patent Roll is dated at Westminster, as proceeding from the Court of

* As, for example, the grant of the Virgership of Windsor castle, at p. 25, was first ordered on the 10th of May, p. 2. The letters patent passed the seal on the 24th: see p. xxix.

Chancery, and not as implying that the King was personally at that palace.<sup>a</sup>

As tending to complete a view of the grants made in the reign of Edward the Fifth, the following calendar of the Roll may be useful. It follows the order of the entries (the references being to the corresponding records in the present volume):—

1. Thomas Bryan and John Sulyard to be justices of assise in the counties of Essex, Hertford, Surrey, Sussex, Kent, and Middlesex, and the city of Canterbury . 14 May.
2. Chauntre to be dean of the chapel-royal (see p. 5) . 16 —
3. William lord Hastings to be master and worker of the moneys, and keeper of the exchange, within the Tower of London, the kingdom of England, and the town of Calais 20 —
4. Evington and Hardgill to be joint-virger of Windsor (pp. 2, 25, and in Rymer's Fœdera) . 24 —
5. Birmingham admitted to lands of inheritance (p. 26) . 25 —
6. Langton, to the temporalities of bishoprick of St. David's (p. 37, and in Rymer's Fœdera, and again Rymer has printed a fresh patent which Langton received for the same object from king Richard on the 6th July following) 21 —
7. Houth to be chancellor of Ireland (p. 41, and in Rymer) . 20 —
8. Sapcote receiver-general of duchy of Cornwall (p. 16) . 21 —
9. John Kendale esquire,<sup>b</sup> servant of our dearest uncle Richard

* This circumstance may by many readers be considered too obvious to require mention; but I allude to it because Mr. Sharon Turner, although as a lawyer he might be expected to be well informed on such a point, when discussing the young king's probable liberty or seclusion, speaks of "his public acts signed on some days in the Tower, and on others at Westminster;" adding in a note, "There are six royal acts dated from Westminster, in the months of May and June, 12 Rym. 180, 7. These imply that Edward went from the Tower to meet his council at Westminster, as occasion required." (Third edit. iii. 402: and see the same argument much amplified by Miss Halsted, more suo, vol. ii. p. 64.) Now, as all those six documents are entries from the Patent Roll, and letters patent were not signed by the king but sealed by the chancellor, it is an error to suppose that they imply such movements on the king's part.

<sup>b</sup> Kendale was afterwards secretary to Richard III. when King. A long

1. Commissions of the peace dated the 14th May (except where otherwise noted),—in the counties of Devon, Hereford, Derby, North Riding of York, parts of Holand in county of Lincoln, West Riding of York, Cornwall (27 May), Westmerland (14 May), parts of Kesteven in the county of Lincoln, Devon (again, 24 May, but the names the same as before), Cumberland, Warwick, Somerset (21 April, with the names of the dukes of Gloucester and Buckingham, but possibly this date is a clerical error), the University of Cambridge (4 June), Westmerland (a repetition, the date and names being the same as before), Nottingham (14 May), Leicester, Southampton, parts of Lyndesey in the county of Lincoln, East Riding of York, Dorset (3 June), Somerset, Roteland (14 May), Northumberland, parts of Kesteven (again, a repetition), and Gloucester (14 June, probably a clerical error for May).

2. Commissions of taxes, in several counties, dated the 27th April.

3. Commission to inquire into the complaint of John Pardo and Consalis de Salamanca, merchants of Spain, owners of the ship Peter of Fonterabia, despoiled at Fowey, dated 21 April.

4. A similar commission respecting the complaint of William le Goauth of Britany, as to his ship called the Nicholas de Landregare, also spoiled by the men of Fowey, dated 28 May.

5. A like commission respecting the ship called la Julyan of Britany, despoiled when at anchor at Ilford Combe by Mathew Cradok of Swansea in Wales, captain of a man of war of this kingdom, dated 5 June.

6. Commission of array to the Duke of Buckingham, in the counties of Salop, Hereford, Somerset, Dorset, and Wilts, dated 16 May (p. 6).

7. To Richard Wilson, one of the king's sergeants at arms, to restore to Roderic de Balmeseda, a ship, &c. despoiled by John Carmynewe esquire, at Padstow, dated 29 April.

I have also examined the clause roll of Edward the Fifth, preserved in the same receptacle, but I find it entirely occupied with enrolments of recognizances in chancery on matters of private concern, with the exception of the two following entries:—

Writ to the sheriffs of all the counties to return the names of persons qualified to receive knighthood, as in p. 23 of this volume, but with the blank filled up with the date of the 18th June, and the writ itself dated the 20th May (printed by Rymer).

In dorso, Writs to the sheriffs of counties for the election of coroners, dated 23d April.

One of the original documents of which this volume preserves a record, is still in existence, and exhibited in one of the show-cases of the Manuscript Department at the British Museum,<sup>a</sup> as presenting at one view the sign-manual of the young king, and that of his uncle the protector. It is the letter under the signet appointing Edmund Holt to be keeper of the gaol at Nottingham (printed at p. 15). It is signed at the top with the king's initials, R. E., and at the foot R. Gloucestre. The wax of the seal is gone, but the ring of woven parchment which inclosed it remains. It is indorsed, "An Iniüccion tavoyde tholde Gaoler and anew to come in his place."

A still more interesting relic of the period before us is preserved in the Cottonian MS. Vespasian F. XIII. It is a square piece of parchment bearing the three autographs of the king and the dukes of Gloucester and Buckingham,<sup>b</sup> thus disposed—

Loyaulte me lie

Richard Gloucestre

Souente me souène

Harre Bokingham.

Under what circumstances these lines were written, it is more easy to conjecture than to decide: but we may readily imagine that it was done very shortly after the dukes had joined the king—

<sup>a</sup> This document, now the Addit. Charter, No. 5987, was purchased of T. Rodd 11 Feb. 1843, having come from Mr. G. Baker's sale, Lot 14. A similar document was possessed by Thane the bookseller, and he engraved from it the autograph of the protector placed under the portrait of Edward V. in his "Autography."

<sup>b</sup> The first of which is engraved in Plate 4, and the two latter in Plate 2, of Fac-similes of Autographs, by J. C. Smith, edited by J. G. Nichols, 4to. 1829.

perhaps in their first efforts to ingratiate themselves in his affections. The name of Gloucester is written in a more formal and clerk-like style than his usual signature.*

A MS. of Wickliffe's New Testament, in the possession of Thomas Banister, esq. of the Inner Temple, is inscribed on its first page with a motto somewhat resembling the former—

A nous me ly Gloucestre.

This has been examined by Sir Frederic Madden and attributed by him (in the Oxford edition of Wycliffe's Bible, 1850,) to the hand of the duke of Gloucester.

It is, we may presume, to the parchment slip first described that Sir George Buck alludes in his Life of Richard, where he says, "His loyalty being a most constant expression in his motto Loyaulte me lie, which I have seen written by his own hands and subscribed Richard Gloucester."

* Of which other specimens will be found in the work last mentioned, Plates 2, 3, 4. A book in the Harleian collection, No. 49, being the romance of Tristan de Leonnois, is inscribed—

and on the same page is written

Elyzabeth.*

The latter is certainly the autograph of the queen of Henry VII. but the former inscription is probably not the autograph of Richard.

SPEECHES PREPARED FOR THE OPENING OF PARLIAMENT,
BY THE LORD CHANCELLOR, JOHN RUSSELL, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

Parliament was usually opened, in the fifteenth century, in one of the chambers of the royal palace of Westminster, in the presence of the King; when a Speech, or introductory discourse, declaring the causes of its assembly, was delivered, not as now by the sovereign in person, but by the lord chancellor. As that high functionary was always a prelate of the church, his exhortation naturally assumed a religious complexion: he started from a text of holy scripture,<sup>a</sup> and supported his arguments by many quotations from the same source; at the same time intermingling both historical parallels and political maxims from the whole range of literature, sacred and profane, with which he was familiar. Many of these discourses are described, and their arguments briefly epitomised, upon the rolls of parliament; but perhaps no other entire specimens have been preserved than those which are now presented to the reader.

Their author was John Russell,<sup>b</sup> bishop of Lincoln. He had been <sup>a</sup> Throughout the fifteenth century (as well as before) this is uniformly the case, until in 1496 we are told that cardinal Morton, then chancellor, took for his exordium a certain well-known history of the Romans after the battle of Cannæ.—Rot. Parl. vi. 509.

<sup>b</sup> John Russell, a native of Winchester and a scholar of New college, Oxford, doctor of civil law, archdeacon of Berkshire from 1472 or from 1465, a prebendary of St. Paul's 1474, consecrated bishop of Rochester Sept. 20, 1476, translated to Lincoln Sept. 9, 1480. He was the first perpetual chancellor of the university of Oxford, the office having been previously annual. He died at his manor of Nettleham Jan. 30, 1494-5; and was buried in his cathedral church. His biography will be found in Wood's Hist. and Antiq. Oxon. ii. 413; Newcourt's Repertorium Londin. i. 179; Campbell's Lives of the Chancellors; and Foss's Lives of the Judges, iv. 476. By Newcourt and some others he is erroneously stated to have had the tuition of king Edward the Fifth, an error arising from confusing him with his predecessor in the see of Rochester of the same Christian name, doctor John Alecock. An early rhetorical production of doctor Russell has attained considerable celebrity in literary history, from its having been supposed, but probably erroneously, to have been one of the earliest productions of the press of Caxton. It is the Latin "pro-preferred by the protector to the office of chancellor, in the place of archbishop Rotherham, who had given offence to the protector by his faint-hearted attempt to place the great seal in the possession of the queen. Doctor Russell had for nine years before been the keeper of the privy seal. He first appears in the character of chancellor on the 2d June, 1483. He is characterised by Sir Thomas More as "a wise manne and a good, and of much experience, and one of the best learned men, undoubtedly, that England had in hys time."

positio" which he addressed to Charles duke of Burgundy in 1470, when he was one of the commissioners sent by Edward IV. to present the order of the garter to that prince. This was printed, probably at Bruges, in the same types which were subsequently used by Caxton in this country; and the only known copy is now in the library at Althorp, having been purchased by Earl Spencer at the sale of the Whiteknights collection in 1819, for the large sum of 120 guineas, though consisting of only 5½ small quarto pages. The oration is reprinted at length in the first volume of Dibdin's edition of Ames's Typographical Antiquities. The autograph letter which king Richard III. addressed to lord chancellor Russell from Lincoln on the 12th Oct. 1483, when he required the great seal during the insurrection of the duke of Buckingham, has been published in fac-simile by the Messrs. Netherclift in their collection of One Hundred Autograph Letters, 1849, 4to. from the original in the Tower of London. In the Cottonian collection, Vesp. E. xii. is a MS. of the Poems of Walter Mape, which is inscribed by Russell's hand, "Le Ruscelluy Je suis. Jo. Lincoln. 1482." Of this inscription a fac-simile is published in Nichols's Autographs, 1829, plate 3. The same motto, surrounding the bishop's device of a throstle, and also accompanied with roses, both in allusion to his name, still remains on the bosses of the great dining-room and the gateway of Buckden palace (see an engraving in the Gentleman's Magazine for March, 1841). His arms were, Azure, two chevronels between three roses or: as they appear on his monument. The epitaph, in which he is made to offer an epitome of his biography, is as follows:

Qui sum, quæ mihi sors fuerat narrabo. Johannes Russel sum dictus, nomen servans genitoris.
 Urbs Ventana parit, studium fuit Oxoniense,
 Doctorem Juris me Sarisburia donat
 Archidiacono; legatum mittit in orbem
 Rex, et privatum mandat deferre sigillum.
 Cancellarie regni tunc denique functus
 Officio, cupii dissolvi vivere Christo.
 Ecclesias duas suscepî pontificales;
 Roffa sacrum primum, Lincolnia condit in unum.
 Anno milleno c quater quater atque viceno,
 Bis septem junctis vitalia lumina claudio.

They are preserved, intermingled with some Latin sermons, probably by the same author, in the MS. Cotton. Vitellius E. x. and from their present disarranged state it has not been easy to determine whether they formed two or three discourses. In the original catalogue of the Cottonian collection they are entered as three pieces, but in the more recent one as two only. The truth appears to be that the earlier composition, that prepared for the parliament of Edward the Fifth, is complete; whilst the later one, prepared for the parliament of Richard the Third, is in detached fragments, portions of which were rejected and rewritten, by the author. The first unfinished portion of the second speech occurs at ff. 141—144 of the volume. At f. 145 commences a Latin sermon, said to have been preached in the chapter-house at Rochester, on the election of a prior. Doctor Russell was bishop of Rochester from 1476 to 1480, during which time this may have been written. Parts of it, at ff. 150 b, 151, and afterwards, appear to be in the author's handwriting, the rest being copied by a transcriber. Next follow several other Latin sermons, on to fol. 169. At f. 170 commences the intended speech to the parliament of Edward the Fifth, and it continues to f. 176. It is immediately followed by the speech which the author actually delivered to the parliament of Richard the Third, which is printed hereafter.

The authorship of the earlier speech is proved by its being in the same handwriting as that of the later, which is identified by the parliament roll (as will be shown hereafter); and the occasion for which it was prepared is proved by internal evidence and by other circumstances which have been already investigated in some preceding remarks (p. xx.)

SPEECH PREPARED FOR THE CONVOCATION.

By a remarkable coincidence the Speech which was prepared for an intended Convocation of the Clergy at the commencement of the reign of Edward V.,* but also prepared in vain, is likewise preserved in the Cottonian collection of MSS. (Cleopatra E. iii. f. 106.) It is headed "1483 p<sup>to</sup> Ed: quinti, at the Convocation of the Clergi;" and again, "1483, feria sexta post dominicam quando cantatur Misericordia Domini oratiuncula ordinata ut diceretur in convocatione; non tamen est dicta hoc tempore." The text is Unum ovile et unus pastor. Joh'is x<sup>m</sup>o, from the conclusion of the sunday gospel of the week.

Mr. Sharon Turner has given some extracts from this composition in a translated form, in order to illustrate the state of the Church at the period. The following "bidding prayer" which occurs at the close of the introduction (p. 109) may be deemed remarkable. The preacher had not yet learned to pray for the Protector. —recollectis de more in nostræ pietatis sinu omnibus qui ad militantis ecclesiæ suffragia pertinere meruerunt. SPEECH PREPARED FOR THE INTENDED PARLIAMENT OF
EDWARD THE FIFTH.

[MS. Cotton. Vitellius E. x. Art. 23, fol. 170-176.]

[Audite insulæ, Et attendite populi de longe, Dominus ab utero vocavit me. The] policie in christen Remes schewethe, over alle yn the dayes that we be yn, how theyr public body is compowned of iij notable partes, of the prince, the nobles, and the people. <sup>a</sup> Whether the bishop here intended a reflection upon the "great Ryvers" to whom the duke of Gloucester was mortally opposed, I leave to the determination of the reader: but I think it highly probable that he intended to lay a particular stress upon these words, so that they should readily catch the ears of his audience, and bear a covert meaning somewhat more intelligible to the majority of his hearers than the rest of his discourse.

<sup>c</sup> Mr. Sharon Turner has misprinted this passage thus: "the ferme ground that men see in the land. Then the common people, &c.

The defense of grownd assayled with rage of waters is wont to be made by dryvyng of pyles or stakys and fastenyng of sure pale to <sup>a</sup> In my opinion, another reflection intended to tell against the unfortunate relatives of the Queen. I may remark that the word is always written in the manuscript with a capital initial, and so is Richesse, which may have been intended to point to the name of the Protector. It should be mentioned, however, that words beginning with that letter have frequently a capital given them by the writer. In this respect the MS. is strictly followed.

<sup>b</sup> This whimsical conjecture regarding the Isle of Wight, which the bishop inserts by way of parenthesis, had also probably some covert allusion beyond mere etymological speculation. Among the titles of earl Ryvers was that of lord of the Isle of Wight.

they did with God mouthe to mouthe; but hyt suffisith the people to receyve with due obeissaunce the prince's commandementes by the direccion of hys wyse ministers and offycers, that saynge to everyche of yow, as they of Israel dyd to Moises, loquere tu nobis et audiemus, non loquatur nobis Dominus. When the grett prince Allemighty God, lord of alle lordes, gaf the lawe yn the hylle to Moises and Aaron, the people stondynge by nethe, nat ferre thens, but att the foote of the mownte, grett thundre clappys were herde, muche lyghtnyng and other terrible impressions wer seyn, whyche sore agasted the people, for the whyche they seyde to Moises, as to a mortalle man such as they were them self, how be yt he was yn hye estate and had undre God the ledyng and governaunce of them, Moises, quod they, our duke and maister, speke thow to us and we shalle here and obeye thee, lete not owr Lord speke un to us. Hyt ys not unknowen but that when so ever the kynge in hys person, for the multitude of mysdoers, takythe upon hym to visite hys Reame . . . yn hys hyghe presence, the criminalle causes of felonyes, murders, and other haynouse and incredible outrages, the ministracion of justice is wont to be so terrible and precise in processe that alle the pertees and persones adjoignaunt quake and tremble for fere. Dicunt ergo, Non loquatur nobis dominus. Wherefor it ys not to doulte but that the rule and governaile of the Reame appereth then in most temperaunce and moderacion when the kynges juges and commisses be obeyd at large in every parte of the londe, so that hys hyghenes and hys nobylle counselle be not letted, where the kynge lystythe beste to be, to entend the politik establysshynge of the Reme. Attendite igitur populi de longe, Gyff then your attendaunce, ye people that stonde ferre of, to the lordes and nobille men whyche be in auctorite; they come from the wele hedd, ye stonde a longe. I speke not to yowe that nowe represent the hele, but to them that ye come fro, whome for ther gret and confuse nombre and multitude nature can not wele suffre to assemble in oo place apt to the makynge of a lawe. When Romulus lakked people and made hys newe cite to be and called azilum, that ys to sey a franchise or

But after they were so ferre encreased that hyt was hard and in maner impossible [for them to meet all together, the] power of the lawe was geven to the [senate] to the nombre of a .C. noble and wyse men; yet after that chalenged the people to haue ther enterlacyng yn gret causes with the nobles, and obteigned a specyalle magistrate called tribunus plebis to be ther president in ther consultacions, lyke as yn the senate the one of the consuls proposed and diffined alle that was amonges them. I see the policie of thys Reme in the tyme of holdyng of parlamentes grettly correspondent to the same maner of the Romanes. Thys ys the howse of the senate. The commons have ther apart. And lyke as yn thys house one tanquam consul makithe the questions, soo yn the lower howse in lyke wyse alle ys directed by the speker quasi per tribunum. * Mr. Sharon Turner remarks upon this passage, "This would seem to imply that there was some picture or statue of the late king near the throne:" but the writer is evidently referring only to the young king's position,—more truly indeed than he imagined at the time, as creating a brief interregnum between the administration of his father and that of his uncle.

<sup>b</sup> Here, unfortunately, we again arrive at the burnt edge of the manuscript, so that the first encomium paid to the royal brothers is lost. The word "marcialle," however, remains. Mr. Sharon Turner misread it "majorall," and transferred the whole to the Protector, reading on, without regarding the lost portion,—“to be hys tutor and protector, to take example of majoralle kunnyng,” &c. Miss Halsted (Life of Richard III. vol. ii. p. 44) has, of course, amplified and perverted all this still further, quoting it as a testimony to Richard's “unblemished character up to this unlooked-for exaltation.”

The next article appears to have been the chancellor's first draft for his Speech prepared for the opening of the parliament of Richard the Third. It seems that the text was intended to have been Lucerna corporis tui est oculus tuus, taken from the gospel of the day (see p. liv.) That gospel (Matthew, vi. 22,) was read on the feast of Saint Martin, Nov. 11, and we may therefore conclude that Richard at first intended to meet his parliament on that day. The same matter was subsequently rewritten, and delivered in somewhat different order, as arranged in p. lviii.

The ryghte ie ys undrestondynge, the left ye ys affeccion. The due and beauteous proporcion of mannys bothe ies ys that the oone be lyke the other both yn colour and quantite. Hyt ys a monstrouse syght oo man to have ij. ies of diverse colours, lyke as they have that techythe oone and doethe a[nother] . . . . . be made by autorite of thys [high court] by the chere syght of the ryghte ie, that ys to say, of the undrestondynge, of suche myschefes as schode be remedied by the same statutes. Thys ie may wele be called a double ie, pursuyng openly yn apparence for justice, and undir that convertly of purpensed entent doynge that ys most unjustice. And so hyt ys, Oculus duplex seu oculus nequam, bonum foret quod esset oculus nequaquam, juxta illum alium locum evangelii, Si oculus tuus scandalizat te, erue eum et projice abs te. Beholde, then, the rownde figuracion of yowre bodely ie, and shape there after the ie of yowr ynward undirstondyng. So that lyke as yn the compasse of the bodely ie there ys but oo lyne where of ys not perceived neither the begynnynge nor the ende, soo the ie of yowr undirstondyng or affeccion, ordeygnd to lede thys comyn [wele] fro parell yn tymes of derkeness, may be fyxed uppon oo ry . . . yn malyce, or endynge yn corrupcion. The . . . of a mannys ryght intencion may be taken not only of the figure of the ie, as yt ys afore towched, but alleso of the maner of seyng, for alle that a man seeythe hyt ys as hyt were undre forme of a triangle, the upper poynte remaynyng yn the self ie, and the ij. poyntes abase representyng the thyngys that ben sayn, gevyng us clerely to undirstond that alle the termes and lymitees of owre thoughtes and affeccions we oughte to referre to oo singular poynt, that ys to sey, to the avauncynge of the comen wele. We be yn the place where thys schuld be tretyd. Thys tyme ys prefixed for the same entente.

The identity of the Speech of which the first portion now follows with that which was actually delivered by the lord chancellor at the opening of the parliament of Richard the Third, on the 23d Jan. 1483-4, is shown by the following passage on the parliament roll:

"Memorandum, quod die Veneris, vicesimo tertio die Januarii anno regni regis Richardi tertii post Conquestum primo, videlicet primo die Parliamenti, ipso domino Rege in Camera Depicta infra palatium suum Westmonasteriensem, regali solio, sedente, præsentibus tunc quamplurimis dominis spiritualibus et temporalibus, ac communibus regni Angliæ ad parliamentum prædictum de mandatis regiis convocatis, Venerabilis pater Johannes Lincolniensis episcopus, cancellarius Angliæ, causas summonitionis parliamenti prædicti notabiliter pronunciavit et declaravit; assumens pro suo themate In corpore multa quidem sunt membra, non autem omnia eundem actum habent. In quibus verbis fidelitatem quam subditi regi ac officia singulorum membrorum principali membro debent graviter et multum politicè declaravit, ponens tria corpora, naturale, artificiosum, scilicet, et politicum, inducens dragmam decimam, unam scilicet ex indumentis pretiosissimis hujusce Anglorum corporis politici, deperditam fore, pro cuius investigatione ac inventionem regem, cunctos dominos spirituales et temporales hoc tempore Parliamenti maximè assiduos diligentesque fore debere ratus est; concludens, quod post inventionem decimæ dragmæ, quæ in rebus agendis perfectionem significare, hoc corpus nostrum, politicum Anglorum scilicet, sanum, incolumen, haud sauciatum vulneratumve, gloriôsè ac per tempora longæva continuat, Regem, Regni Proceres, ac Communitatem interius et extra, pacem pacisque Auctorem perhenniter colere." (Rotuli Parliam. vol. vi. p. 237.)

The following pages contain the substance of those which have last preceded, rewritten and rearranged, and a small portion of the Speech which had been prepared for the intended parliament of Edward the Fifth is also introduced. From the abrupt termination of this Speech it is evidently imperfect; and, even with the addition of a further portion of the preceding fragments, it would not extend to the length of the finished Speech prepared on the former occasion.

NOTES.

- P. 2. " Item a lettre to the Pope for J. S. to take upon him thoffice of C.
" Item a lettre to the Cardenall[s], for the same entent."

The person here intended was John Sherwood, archdeacon of Richmond and bishop elect of Durham. He had been ambassador to Rome from king Edward IV. "prothonotarius apostolicus, et orator regis Angliæ," and he aspired to the rank of a Cardinal, but was disappointed. Why his name and his object should have been designated by initials in the present record is a mystery. Is it possible that the memorandum came from the pen of doctor Sherwood himself? he was at this time in England, and as a North-countryman may have been personally attached to the service of the duke of Gloucester. In his coronation procession Richard walked between the bishop elect of Durham and Robert Stillington bishop of Bath and Wells. In the following year (March, 1485-6) doctor Sherwood again went to Rome, being joined in embassy with Thomas Langton bishop of St. David's, soon after bishop of Salisbury. It was not until that time that king Richard (by letter dated the 28th Feb.) first addressed the Pope, announcing his accession to the throne, and then proceeding to request the papal commendation to bishop Sherwood's election. On the 2nd March the King wrote further letters to the Pope, and to the Cardinals, urging doctor Sherwood's claim for election into the sacred college: so that the letters which were to have been written in May 1485, were not actually dispatched until ten months after. These letters, which are preserved in the MS. Harl. 433, are printed by Rymer in his Fœdera, &c. Though disappointed of his election as cardinal, Sherwood was so much attached to Italian life, that he again went to Rome for his own pleasure, and died there on the 12th Jan. 1493-4, when he was designated in his epitaph as (having formerly been) "serenissimi regis Angliæ orator." See the memoir of him in the first volume of Surtees's History of Durham.

P. 3. Pury Park. This is not "Puvy," but Pury Park, alias Grafton Park, co. Northampton: see Baker's History of Northamptonshire, vol. ii. p. 220.

P. 3. Seal of the earldom of March. An engraving of this seal, as made for Edward IV. will be found in Sandford's Genealogical History of England, 1677, p. 354.

P. 12. A lettre to the bisshope of Excestre to deliver the duchesse of Escestre unto my lord of Bakingham. The lady who was the subject of this letter will not be readily discovered in the ordinary works on the peerage, but her identity is shown by an act of parliament passed 1 Ric. III. The lady Anne of York, the eldest sister of Edward IV. had been first married to Henry Holand duke of Exeter, who was attainted as a Lancastrian in 1 Edw. IV. 1461, and who, having lived for some years a pensioner at the court of the duke of Burgundy, returned in 1473 to fight at the battle of Barnet, and was soon after found a corpse upon the shore of the county of Kent. In the interval between those dates, the duchess, having obtained some kind of divorce, formed another alliance with sir Thomas St. Leger (who occurs in 1462 as one of the esquires for the king's body, Rot. Parl. v. 534), and gave birth to a second daughter, having already had one by the duke. Both the half-sisters bore the same name as their mother. After the birth of the younger, her father sir Thomas St. Leger induced the King to allow an act to be passed, in the parliament of 1467, whereby his daughter was nominated heir to the duchy of Exeter, in default of issue of her elder sister. The elder Anne died shortly after, and the duchess deceased in 1475, "without issue of her body by the said duke." Thus it was that the younger Anne became, in pursuance of the act of 1467, "duchess of Exeter," as styled in the text;* and her great

* The transmission of the higher dignities of the peerage in England by heirs female has been less recognised by those who have written on the subject than historical evidences would justify. It was a principle always acknowledged, though of course we have not the confirmatory proof that the lawyers have required,—that of sitting in parliament. As an example somewhat parallel to the present may be mentioned the instance of another princess, Margaret daughter and heir of Thomas of Brotherton, Earl of Norfolk. She was never created a countess; yet she is designated Countess of Norfolk in the rolls of parliament 21 Ric. III. (vol. iii. p. 355), and also at the end of a writ of 35 Edw. III.

inheritance was too important to be left to the disposal of ordinary matrimonial chances. The queen had directed her eyes to it for the aggrandisement of her first family; and in 1482 arrangements were made for the future marriage of the duchess of Exeter to Thomas Grey, son and heir apparent of the marquess of Dorset, upon whom a settlement was made, a certain portion of the estates being at the same time divided off for the advantage of his uncle lord Richard Grey. This arrangement was confirmed by an act of parliament passed in the same year (Rot. Parl. vi. 215). At the time, therefore, of the death of Edward IV. the estates of the duchy of Exeter were destined to aggrandise the family of Grey, and the queen's grandson would in due time, had the marriage been fulfilled, have become duke of Exeter. Hence arose the anxiety of the duke of Gloucester to obtain possession of the person of the young lady. She was living, it appears, under the care of Piers Courtenay, bishop of Exeter, one of the family of the earls of Devon, who subsequently acted in opposition to the government of king Richard, and was in consequence outlawed. By another act of parliament, passed 1 Ric. III. the acts of 7 and 22 Edw. IV. were annulled (Rot. Parl. vi. 244), and the duchy of Exeter was thus again resumed by the sovereign. The father of the heiress, sir Thomas St. Leger, was thrown into bitter enmity towards king Richard by this treatment, and zealously connected himself with the Lancastrian party, but he was premature in his conduct, and, being arrested in Devonshire at the time of the threatened invasion of the earl of Richmond, he was beheaded at Exeter in Nov. 1484, "although countless sums of money were offered for his life." (Chron. Croyland, p. 569.) One Thomas Rame esquire shared his fate. (Izacke's Memorials of Exeter.) The quondam duchess was subsequently married to sir George Manners, lord Roos, and became the progenitrix of the earls and dukes of Rutland; but the dignity of Duke of Exeter was never revived, and the title, with the rank of Marquess, was subsequently given to the quoted by Banks in his Baronia Anglica Concentrata, i. 33; and, when her son John Mowbray was created a duke in 1397, she also was elevated to the like degree. So Anne Beauchamp, the infant heiress of the earldom of Warwick, who died in 1449, æt. 10, had the title of Countess of Warwick, as Dugdale states in his Baronage, i. 248. The same principle was admitted in the case of the daughter of the duke of Clarence and mother of the Poles, whose title to the earldom of Salisbury was confirmed by act of parliament in 1513.

Courtenays. It was on the 18th June, 1525, that king Henry VIII. conferred upon Thomas lord Roos, son of the lady Anne, the dignity of earl of Rutland, which had been previously enjoyed by his great-uncle Edmund of York (killed at Wakefield in 1460); and on the same day the dignity of marquess of Exeter was bestowed on Henry Courtenay earl of Devon, the grandson of king Edward IV. by his daughter Katharine.

P. 29. Sir John Neville. Writers who have noticed this appointment to the custody of Pontefract Castle have been at a loss to identify sir John Neville. There was one knight of that name, a natural son of the earl of Westmerland, who has been mentioned in the note at p. x. But there was also a sir John Neville of Holbeck, co. York, who was sheriff of Yorkshire in the 3rd and 10th Hen. VII. and it seems very probable that he may have had the charge of Pontefract Castle at the time of the execution of Ryvers, &c.

P. 58. Roger Townshend. The writ of privy seal dated at the Tower of London on the 12th June, and which was delivered to the lord chancellor at Westminster on the 14th, for appointing Roger Townshend a serjeant-at-law, is printed in Rymer's Fœdera, ex bundel. infra Turrim Lond.

P. 65. The license to export oats to Burgundy, dated the 28th May, was followed by a writ of privy seal dated at the Tower of London on the 2nd of June, which is printed in Rymer's Fœdera, and which was on the 3rd delivered to the lord chancellor at Westminster, directing him to make letters patent for the same purpose.

P. 71. John Payne, doctor in divinity, prior provincial of the order of friars preachers in England, had received a grant of the temporalities of the bishopric of Meath by letters patent dated 25th Feb., 22 Edw. IV., and he received confirmation thereof by letters patent dated 6th July, 1 Ric. III., which are printed in Rymer's Fœdera.

P. 77. Dame Alice Savile, who received the grants of wine and venison specified in this page, was daughter of Sir William Gascoigne of Gawthorpe, and widow of Sir John Savile, an old servant of the house of York, who died chief steward of the manor of Wakefield, at the castle of Sandal, on the octaves of the feast of Corpus Christi, 1482. On the 3rd July following his widow took the vow of perpetual charity. See the pedigree of Savile in Hunter's South Yorkshire.

Rex omnibus ad quos &c. salutem. Supplicavit nobis dilectus clericus noster Johannes Gourle ut cum quædam cantaria unius capellæ in ecclesia parochiali de Kemsey in comitatu Wygorn' ab antiquo fundata, de certis possessionibus et redditibus in villis de Kemsey et Norton dotata, tam propter exilitatem proficuorum ejusdem cantariæ quam propter negligentiam et incuriam capellanorum diversorum ibidem temporibus retroactis deservientium a possessionibus et redditibus prædictis quasi desolata remaneat et destructa, quod capellanus aliquis cantariam illam admittere ad deservendum eidem cantariæ per magnum tempus non curavit, dictusque Johannes præmissis pie compatiens mediante licentia nostra emendare proponat. Ita quod capellanus qui ad altare beatæ Mariæ in ecclesia de Kemsey prædicta celebraturus pro anima fundatoris cantariæ prædictæ ordinandus existit habeat sibi et successoribus suis redditus et possessiones unde dicta cantaria primitus fuit fundata, et ut idem Johannes tanti operis pietatis fiat particeps et dicta cantaria melius imposterum valeat sustentari, eandem cantariam de certis terris et possessionibus cupiat augmentari, velimus licentiam regiam ad hoc impartiri et concedere eidem Johanni quod ipse duo messuagia sexaginta acras terræ sex acras prati et quinque acras bosci cum pertinentiis in villa et parochia de Kemsey dare possit et assignare Johanni Carpenter nunc capellano in dicta ecclesia de Kemsey celebranti: Habendum et tenendum sibi et successoribus suis capellanis divina pro anima fundatoris dictæ primæ cantariæ ac salubri statu nostro et præfati Johannis Gourle dum vixerint et animabus eorundem cum ab hac luce migraverint, necnon pro anima Adæ Moleyns nuper Cices-trensis episcopi ac animabus patris et matris dicti Johannis Gourle et parentum suorum et omnium fidelium defunctorum in dicta ecclesia de Kemsey singulis diebus celebraturis. Nos consideratione præmissorum concessimus et licentiam dedimus pro nobis et hæredibus nostris quantum in nobis est eidem Johanni Gourle quod ipse prædicta duo messuagia sexaginta acras terræ sex acras prati et quinque acras bosci cum pertinentiis in villa et parochia de Kemsey dare possit et assignare præfato capellano, habendum sibi et successoribus suis capellanis cantariæ prædictæ divina pro statu et animabus prædictis in dicta ecclesia parochiali de Kemsey ad altare prædictum singulis diebus celebraturis imperpetuum. Et eidem capellano quod ipse prædicta messuagia terram pratum et boscum cum pertinentiis ei sic per præfatum Johannem Gourle danda et assignanda ab eodem Johanne Gourle recipere possit et tenere sibi et successoribus suis prædictis divina ut prædictum est singulis diebus celebraturis imperpetuum, et quod idem capellanus ejusdem cantariæ et successores sui capellani ejusdem cantariæ terras tenementa redditus et posses-siones quæcunque ad valorem quadraginta solidorum per annum ultra reprisas quæ de nobis in capite non tenentur de quacunque persona sive quibuscunque personis et eis dare concedere legare vel assignare volenti seu volentibus perquirere et recipere possint et possit. Habendum et tenendum sibi et successoribus suis capellanis prædictis in sustentationem suam imperpetuum. Et eidem personæ sive eisdem personis et eorum cuilibet quod ipsi et quilibet eorum terras tenementa redditus et possessiones hujusmodi usque ad annuam valorem supradictam præfato capellano cantariæ predictæ pro tempore existenti et successoribus suis prædictis in forma prædicta dare concedere legare vel assignare possint et possit tenore præsentium similiter licentiam damus specialem. Statuto de terris et tenementis ad manum mortuam non ponendis edito non obstante. Nolentes quod iidem Johannes Gourle vel successores sui aut præfatus capellanus vel successores sui prædicti ratione præmissorum per nos vel hæredes nostros justiciarios escaetores vicecomites aut alios ballivos seu ministros nostros quoscunque occasionentur molestentur in aliquo seu graventur. Salvis tamen capitalibus dominis feodi illius servitiis inde debitis et consuetis [&c.] aut aliquo alio statuto actu ordinatione sive restrictione in contrarium edito sive facto seu aliqua prosecutione alicujus inquisitionis virtute brevis nostri de Ad quod dampnum non obstante. To the Prive Seale.

Right trusty and welbeloved, we grete you wele. And where as the most famous prince of blissid memorie my lord and fader, whome God assoille, before his decesse directed his lettres missives of recomendacion unto our holy fader the Pope for oure full trusty chapleyn M. John Payne doctour of divinite to promote him unto the see episcopall of Meeth within our lande of Irland than being voide by the decesse of William late bisshop and pastor of the same, the which holy fader hath promoted the said maister John unto the said bisshopricke with all the spirituelties and temporalties therunto belonging, as by the bulles of oure said hooly fader therupon made it doth appere alle at large. Where also my said lord and fader by his lettres patentes under his gret seale for certain causes him moving gave and graunted unto the said master John the keping of all the temporaltes belonging to the said bishopricke during the tyme that it shuld stand voide, to have and enyoie the same without any accompt or other thing yelding therfore. And also the said famous prince towards the reparacions of the maners and lordships of the said bishopricke, whiche as we be enfourmed be full ruinous and in gret decaie, gave and graunted unto the said master John all suche graynes and fruites as apperteigned to the said bisshopricke, and therupon directed his lettres of privie seale to the deputie lieutenaunt of the said lande the lordes spirituell and temporelle ther to aide and assiste the said master John aswele on takyng possession and leveing the said temporaltes as the said graynes and frutes. Therefore we, by thadvise of our most entierly beloved oncle the Duc of Gloucestre protectour and defensour of this our royalme, wolle and charge you that under our prive seale being in your warde ye do make herupon such and as many our lettres to the depute lieutenant or other havynge rule or guyding for the tyme of our said land, the lordes spirituall and temporell ther, and to all other to whome it shalbe necessarie and behovefull, conjunctly or severally, according to suche fourmes and tenours and with as many good clauses as by the said master John and his counsaill shalbe goodely advised, charging them by the same that, the said master John doynge his duete according, they geve aide and assistance aswele to put him in reall possession of and in the spiritualtes and temporaltes of the said bisshopricke as to leve and gader the revenues of the temporaltes aforsaid with the arreragies if any be whiche were due in the tyme of the said vacacion according to the forsaid graunt, togeder with the said granes and fruites to him gyven for the causes aforsaid, Geyng unto them sufficient auctorite and power to compelle and constrene every persone that hath occupied or occupieth the premisses or any part therof and withholdith any thing contrarie to the said grauntes to make due accomptes and satisfaction to the said master John so and in suche wise as he shall of reason hold him content. And overthis we, trusting in the gret sadnesse discretion and wisdom of the said maister John, and for the wele, good pollicie and tranquillite of our said land and subgettes of the same, wolle that ye addresse our other lettres unto the said depute or ruler for the tyme and the lordes spirituall and temporell of our secrete counsaill ther, charging them to receyve and admitte the said maister John to be one of our said secrete counsaill of our said land. And these our lettres shalbe your sufficient warraunt and discharge at all tymes. Yeven under &c. the                      day of Juyn the first yere of oure reigne.

To our right trusty and welbeloved clerk and counsellour maister
John Gunthorpe keeper of oure prive seale.

Right trusty &c. And for asmoche as we this day have received a bull herin enclosed from oure hooly fader the Pope by the whiche we clerly understande that his faderhoode hath preferred oure trusty and welbeloved clerk and chaplayn maister John Payne doctoure of divinitie unto the bisshopricke of Methe in oure lande of Irland.

We therefore, by thadvise of oure derrest uncle the Duc of Gloucestre protectour and defensour of this our royalme during oure yong age, wolle and charge you that under our prive seale being at your warde ye do make oure lettres to be directed unto oure Chauncelor of Irland forsaïd comaunding him by the same that under oure gret seale of the same oure lande being in his keping he do make herupon oure writtes suche and as many as unto the said maister John for the restitution of his temporalties of the said bisshopriche shalbe necessarie and behovefull. Provided alweyes that he do unto oure depute lieutenaunt of our said land or other havng oure power ther his feaute due and accostumed in that behalve and also renounce all thinges in the said bull or other conteigned which ben prejudiciall unto us and oure corone. And these oure lettres shalbe your warraunt and sufficient discharge in that partie. Yoven under our signet at oure Toure of London the viijth day of Juyn the fyrst yere of the reigne of king Edward the fyfte.

To th'abbottes of Fountayns, Stratford, and Woburn, reformatours of that religion within this oure royalme, and to every of them.

Right trusty and welbeloved in God, we grete you wele. Albeit now in late daies past, not oonely by your assentes and other faders of your religion within this oure royalme, but also at the desire and pleasure of the famous prince of blissid memorie oure brother whome God assoille, it was condescended and agreed that alle suche annuell contributions as hertofore hath ben by you and them graunted to the hede house of Cisteux, whiche by a statut into the contrarie therof made be utterly forboden, shuld be besett and bestowed by th'oversight of oure right trusty and welbeloved in God th'abbot of oure monastery of Stratford towarde and aboute the buylding of the collage called Bernardes College beside oure universite of Oxonford, founded for scolers of your said religion, [a] thing full expedient and necessarie. Yet nathelesse it is shewed unto us and to the lordes of oure counsell that certain faders of your said religion, not remembring the good entent and meritorious werk, nor feering the pynalte of the said statut as it semeth, privatly and by colour meove and exhorte asmoche as in them is, as it is said, that the said money shuld be leveed and paied to the use of the said hedehouse, which the premisses considered ne shalbe suffred And therefore by th'advise of oure derest uncle the Duc of Gloucestre protectour and defendour of this oure royaume during our yonge age* we wolle and charge you that if ye shalle knawe and perceyve any so disposed amongst you ye do him or them to be reformed and corrected And that ye faille [not] so to do as ye wolle advoide the perille and paynalte of the said statut and our grevous displeasure. Yoven &c. the xxv<sup>te</sup> day of May.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS, 1854.

AT a MEETING of the COUNCIL of the Camden Society held at No. 25, Parliament Street, Westminster, on Wednesday the 10th May, 1854, the Council having proceeded to the Election of Officers,—

JOHN BRUCE, Esq. was elected Director; JOHN PAYNE COLLIER, Esq. Treasurer; and WILLIAM J. THOMS, Esq. Secretary, for the Year next ensuing.

REPORT OF THE COUNCIL
THE CAMDEN SOCIETY,
ELECTED 2nd MAY, 1853.

THE COUNCIL of the Camden Society, elected on the 2nd May, 1853, are gratified at being enabled to refer to the Report of the Auditors for proof that the condition of the Society continues highly satisfactory.

The Council have to regret the deaths during the past year of the following Members:—

SIR WILLIAM BETHAM, Ulster, F.S.A.

JOHN BIDWELL, Esq. F.S.A.

J. DODSLEY CUFF, Esq. F.S.A.

REV. THOMAS DYER.

THOMAS G. B. ESTCOURT, Esq.

REV. RICHARD JENKYN, D.D.

C. W. LOSCOMBE, Esq.

ROBERT WHEATLEY LUMLEY, Esq.

THOMAS JOHN MANCHEE, Esq.

JOHN PALMER, Esq.

Very Rev. The DEAN OF PETERBOROUGH.

EDWARD DAVIS PROTHEROE, Esq. F.S.A.

The LORD BISHOP OF SALISBURY.

THOMAS SAUNDERS, Esq. F.S.A.

CLEMENT T. SMYTHE, Esq.

MR. JUSTICE TALFOURD.

This list, it will be seen, contains the names of several of the earliest supporters of the Society; and to it is to be added that of one of our first Local Secretaries, the late SETH WILLIAM STEVENSON, Esq. F.S.A., of Norwich, a gentleman distinguished alike for his zeal and punctuality in all matters connected with the Society, and his anxiety at all times to promote its interests. The Council have nominated ROBERT FITCH, Esq. Local Secretary for Norwich. They have also appointed JOHN ROSS COULTHARD, Esq. F.S.A. Scot. Local Secretary for Ashton-under-Lyne and its neighbourhood.

The publications of the past year have been—

I. Promptorium: An English and Latin Dictionary of Words in use during the Fifteenth Century, compiled chiefly from the Promptorium Parvulorum. By ALBERT WAY, Esq. M.A., F.S.A. Vol. II. (M to R.)

The Members have no doubt been gratified at receiving this further portion of a volume of so much philological value. They will share with the Council in the strong hope that Mr. Way's engagements will enable him speedily to complete this important work.

II. Regulæ Inclusarum: The Ancren Rewle: A Treatise on the Rules and Duties of Monastic Life, in the Anglo-Saxon Dialect of the 13th Century. Edited by the Rev. JAMES MORTON, B.D. Prebendary of Lincoln.

This, like the preceding work, is a valuable contribution to English philology, and of great interest for its illustration of the social and religious condition of the age in which it was produced.

III. Letters of the Lady Brilliana Harley: 1625—1643. Edited by the Rev. F. T. LEWIS, M.A.

IV. The Household Roll of Richard Swinfield, Bishop of Hereford, 18 Edw. I. Edited by the Rev. JOHN WEBB, M.A., F.S.A. Vol. I.

This work has been so recently issued that few of the Members can have had an opportunity of ascertaining its importance as a contribution to our ecclesiastical history—and especially to that of the Diocese of Hereford. The length to which the work has extended has induced the Council to issue the Roll at once. The Introduction, &c. will follow almost immediately in a separate volume. Not until the whole work is before them, can the Society fully judge of the great pains which the Editor has taken to produce this interesting Document in a form best calculated to show its historical value.

The Council have added the following works to the List of Suggested Publications:—

I. A MS. Narrative of Proceedings at Tunbridge in 1643, written by Mr. Thomas Weller, a resident in that town; with various inedited Letters relating to the same period. To be edited by RICHARD ALMACK, Esq. F.S.A.

II. The Correspondence of Sir Robert Cotton, from the Cottonian MS. (Julius C. III.) To be edited by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A.

III. The Household Book of William Lord Howard, "Belted Will." To be edited by JAMES CROSBY, Esq., F.S.A.

Among the works in the Press the Council would refer to two, the Domesday of St. Paul's, which has been delayed by the illness of the Editor, the Venerable Archdeacon Hale; and the Extent of the Lands held in England by the Knights Templars, edited by the Rev. L. B. Larking, (which can only proceed slowly through the press, owing to the necessity for sending the proof sheets to Malta for collation,) as among works calculated to maintain the high character of the Society. It is not likely that either of these works, however unquestionably valuable, would have ever been committed to the press but for the existence of this Society. By such publications the Camden Society is rendering important service to the cause of historical literature, and the Council call upon the Members generally not only to continue their support, but to add to the influence and the utility of the Society by obtaining for it the co-operation of all who hold with Bacon, that "Histories make men wise."

By Order of the Council,

JOHN BRUCE, Director.

WILLIAM J. THOMS, Secretary.
